DAILY GAZETTE.

From the New York Herald.

We have this week the pleasure to record the success of the most extraordinary invention of the age, if not the most so of any the world ever saw—at least the great stride in invention ever made by a single individual.

In October last Dr. Solomon Andrews, of Perth Amboy, N. J., commenced the construction of a war aerial, for recon-noitering purposes, on his own personal responsibility, not being able, after submitting his plans to the War Department, to make the honorable secretary of war "see the utility of a machine which would go over into action and reconnoiter the force and position of the enemy. His plans showed on the face of them, to any one not stupid, that the machine could not do otherwise than go ahead in any direction in which the bow is pointed, and that, too, with any amount of power or force which might be desired, and which greenbacks would readily procure. The power required and the propelling apparatus added but little weight to the apparatus, whether of large or small dimensions; consequently it did not increase the dimensions of the apparatus beyond that of balloons of ordinary construction, much less in size than many that are now made. The machine made by Mr.

Andrews would carry up three men in addition to all the fixtures and paraphernalia for its forward movement. It contained twenty-six thousand cubic feet of hydrogen gas. It carried him, weighing one hundred and seventy pounds, and two hundred and fifty pounds of ballast.

Upon his invitation last spring, we have

THE BATTLE IN NORTHERN GEORGIA.

Interesting Facts and Incidents.

The Cincinnati Commercial's correspondent in the army—gives us a full and graphic account of the recent battle, differing in some respects from the account we have already published, and is much more favorable.

Closing up a description of the last day's fight, he says:

At five o'clock, a courier from General Thomas arrived, and reported that he was driving the enemy again. Reinforced by Gen. Gordon Granger, he had turned upon the enemy, who was himself beginning to exhibit signs of prostration. I felt a thrill of joy at this wholly unexpected announcement. I had thought the destruction of the army inevitable. Thomas, at least, entertained a different opinion. He had taken a position on Missionary Ridge, where he still covered all ingress to Chattanooga. What was left of the 20,000 fighting men in his corps were with him, and remains of other divisions formed up on his right. The position was a strong one, and the enemy in vain attempted to carry it. Their efforts were much feebler than in the morning, though there was still danger in them.

From this time Thomas, glorious Thomas, held them at every point; charge after charge, he rolled off with his troops inspired by Granger's timely brigades. As the efforts of the enemy grew feebler, he threw forward several brigades and drove him back almost beyond his old position, regaining one of his most important hospitals.

I firmly believe that the sudden giving way of the rebel divisions insured the salvation of the army. The right had been denuded of troops to reinforce the left. The brave divisions that remained endeavored to close up the gaps on the double quick, but many, as I have already said, were shot down on the march. Out of position, by the artful manœuvring of the rebels on their own left, they must either have been surrounded or have given way as they did, precipitately.

There is every reason to believe that the sudden disappearance of these two divisions threw the enemy into equal disorder. Some of his attacking brigades were opposed and driven away in confusion; others advanced slowly through forests, expending their ammunition on the vacuum. At sunset on Sunday night Dragg's lines must have been as curiously disposed as our own.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Night fell, and the battle of Chickamauga—still a riddle to us—was over. We had lost ground and guns, but we had terribly punished the enemy. Our casualties, for such terrific fighting, will not be found so heavy as might be anticipated. The loss of the enemy must be fearful. Our artillery was used with tremendous effect. The enemy probably did not use a half dozen batteries. He had told his men that this battle could only be won by the bayonet, but the bayonet has not won it yet.

Glorious Thomas was the tower of strength that saved the army. On Saturday, I saw him for a moment, as the rattles of fearful battle rolled in front of his men. Intuitively I stopped to look at one of the grandest life pictures I ever saw, though one of the least pretentious. Sitting on a tranquil horse, watching every sign of the contest with a serene air, that I could have deemed impossible in mortal man in such a scene, I felt a reverence for him steal over me. It was a picture of ineffable courage, tempered with wisdom and gentleness. Angelo would have thrown aside his chisel if he could have seen Thomas as I saw him, the incarnation of manly majesty.

The last time I had seen him he was giving a weary struggle in the march past direction where to find his regiment. He did this with a ready and gentle smile, and then he told me that he was a symbol of the true gentleman. Known as a boy as "Old George Thomas," from the open integrity of his character, it is not strange that Providence selected him to wrench safety, if not victory, out of a last battle—the safety, perhaps, of the nation itself.

Where was Sherman? "Captured!" you have been told that night. But I did not believe it. I had seen too much of him and his fighting division to credit that story. At midnight Sunday night, Sheridan Griffin had to Thomas, and reported for duty with more men and more guns than he had carried into the fight originally.

Even after he was cut off he repelled a desperate charge of the enemy, and one of his regiments—the 51st Illinois—captured the battle flag of the 24th Alabama and the sword of the regiment, who was carrying it, endeavoring to rally his men. The General is an ardent, practical student of roads, and he had decided to know exactly where his staff one day, on a march of six miles must have gone double, that distance before I found that the General was taking his daily lesson in geography. Gathering together his noble brigades, two of whom had lost their beloved leaders, he struck across the Missionary Ridge directly to the west, as the rebels had possession of the country to the north of him, including, for all he knew, every road. Thence the top of the ridge, he caused the "assembly" to be blown, and picked up all the stragglers from other divisions he could find. He had lost three pieces of artillery in the fight, but he came across a quantity that other divisions had abandoned, and took it in charge. In this way he saved a whole battery, given up for lost by Johnson.

With all that was left of his own division, and with a long line of stragglers and additional artillery, he struck the road on top of Missionary Ridge, which he traversed until he found it in possession of the enemy. Quietly breaking up against the rebels, he steadily passed, the enemy's flank, regaining the road, and turning east through Roseville, and without halting a moment, he reinforced Thomas by midnight, as I have already indicated.

Before dark, McCook and Crittenden returned to the field, and during the night the army was reorganized and placed in the position around Roseville, shown on the map.

Monday, all expected a renewal of the fight. Thomas held the impregnable gap through Missionary Ridge, at Roseville; McCook's divisions were thrown to the west of the ridge, while Crittenden and Granger were either held in reserve or forward points on the left.

But the enemy was wary. Toward noon he sent up a heavy line of skirmishers, they ran off precipitately after a few volleys fired, our brave lads. Late in the afternoon, seeing the dust rising from one of our trains carrying provisions to the front, they threw a few shells in the direction, which did no damage.

I rode through the lines that day, and can testify that our army was in excellent spirits. I found McCook's and Crittenden's corps, branded as utterly defeated by a sudden correspondent, standing behind a heavy palisade of rails and logs, crowned by a artificial abatis and concealed by bushes. Cannon were in position, and they, too, were masked with bushes. Thomas, on the ridge, though holding a position strong naturally, had erected good palisades, and was simply impregnable.

"The stragglers that had reached Chattanooga came back during Monday, im-with shouts by their regiments, something in the following manner: "Hillo, here comes Old Stonewall." "Well, I'll be d— here's Stonewall; though he was killed." And each side would be followed by about that spoke of anything but discomfiture or lack of spirit.

"By Monday night the army was all together again and perfectly reorganized. But there were many reasons why it should fall back on Chattanooga. The town was already partially fortified, and the position was as strong as the one they occupied around Knoxville. The fear was that the enemy might attempt to cross the Tennessee, and this could best be prevented, or the aim of such a movement best defeated, by our army being ready to cross at any moment. Accordingly, in the evening, the columns were all sent to the rear, and by midnight our whole army had abandoned Roseville and were moving into position around Chattanooga. There I left it, ready and willing to fight. I feel it completely reorganized, confident that 'we'll whip them yet,' and I firmly believe they will, if again attacked.

"Beyond a few guns, which the Confederates gained by her forceful battles of the Chickamauga?"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

It is stated that both Gen. McCook and Gen. Crittenden have been relieved of their commands in the army of the Cumberland, and ordered before the court of inquiry to investigate their conduct in the recent battles of Chickamauga.

Gen. McCook is understood to have made serious complaints against them in his dispatches.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Sept. 29.

Special to Chicago Tribune.—Authentic advices from Washington were received today, from which I learn that Kansas will certainly be made a separate department, and General Curtis placed in command. This news gives great satisfaction.

There has been intense excitement here for the past three days, consequent upon the killing of Union citizens in Platte county, Missouri, last night. The president of the Union League at Farley received information that Col. Miles' men advancing with the avowed intention of clearing out the Union League. As they were poorly armed, and there was no time for co-operation, he came over here for assistance. The Union League was called together at midnight, and a committee went to Weston to ascertain the facts. The committee reported that Col. Coalition with the Rebels.

The whole course of the copperhead press in opposing the war for the restoration of the Union proves that they favor the rebels; that they desire them to succeed. The proof, however, is not confined to copperhead newspapers. Many say, in London, that "all the difficulties that the peace party can throw in the way of the war party of the north, operate directly as so much aid and comfort to the south."

The Georgia Constitutionalist, of Sept. 9, says: "Mr. Vallandigham himself, as we have heard, most emphatically declared that the success of southern arms alone could give strength and consistency to the peace movement;" the same paper says "if Johnston and Bragg can defeat Rosecrans and Burnside, then we may expect the most favorable results from the Ohio election."

As copperheads are alike everywhere, the rebels expect to influence copperhead public opinion throughout the whole country, by a great victory over the Union forces. If the rebels are defeated the copperheads are disheartened and will not vote; if our soldiers are slaughtered or dispersed, then copperhead stock goes up, and they work with a will at the elections. As the country is victorious over its enemies these traitors seek their holes; and if the rebels succeed they are jubilant and hope to win a political victory.

The evidences of their coalition with the rebels is not seen alone in what they say; where their hearts are, there, also, will be their sympathies. What they do to obstruct the government is one thing; how they act and how they talk when there has been a battle, are other evidences.

Who can doubt, therefore, that the leaders of the copperhead party in the north are in coalition with the rebels? Their followers are, most of them, dopes to these designing and dangerous men.

AN ENLIGHTENED JUSTICE.—We learn that the New Lisbon justice before whom the soldiers accused of the murder of Beltinger were brought for examination, gave the opinion that a law of congress excluded the civil authorities from all jurisdiction in such cases, and remanded the prisoners to the hands of the military authorities.

The man is either a knave or an ignoramus. The probability is that he expects to please somebody by doing his best to ward shielding the guilty parties from punishment. If congress ever passed any law of the sort, it is wholly inapplicable to the case, and about as binding on the New Lisbon justice as a territorial statute of Kansas. The man ought to be awarded a leather medal for the discovery that a soldier may murder a citizen of the state and not be responsible to state laws. It is certainly to be hoped that the New Lisbon system of jurisprudence will not be permitted to extend itself beyond Janesville county.—M. News.

The difficulty in this case, we presume, is that the "New Lisbon justice" is a reader of the News, and is either "ignorant" enough to believe what it says, or "knave" enough to follow its teachings. The News has been continually asserting that the military authority has usurped the civil power and completely absorbed all civil rights. Now, when it has a different object to accomplish it denies its former doctrines and abuses a double follower for putting any faith in its preaching. The admission now made, by whatever reason it may be dictated or however indirectly elicited, will be useful as showing the hypocrisy and objects of a leading copperhead journal in its factions opposition to the measures of the government.

A letter from Dr. Dodge, of this city, who accompanied Dr. Wolcott to Nashville, states that they arrived there safely, and that on Friday last there were

THE BATTLE IN NORTHERN GEORGIA.

Interesting Facts and Incidents.

The Cincinnati Commercial's correspondent in Gen. Rosecrans' army—one of the most reliable writers in the army—gives a full and graphic account of the recent battles, differing in some respects from the account we have already published, and is much more favorable.

Following up a description of the last day's fight, he says:

At five o'clock, a courier from General Thomas arrived, and reported that he was driving the enemy again. Re-inforced by Gen. Gordon Granger, he had turned upon the enemy, who was himself beginning to exhibit signs of prostration. I felt a thrill of joy at this wholly unexpected announcement. I had thought the destruction of the army inevitable. Thomas, at least, entertained a different opinion. He had taken a position on Missionary Ridge, where he had covered all ingress to Chattanooga. What was left of the 20,000 fighting men in his corps were with him, and remnants of other divisions formed on his right. The position was a strong one, and the enemy in vain attempted to carry it. Their efforts were most feeble; they in the morning, though there was still danger in them.

From this time Thomas, glorious Thomas, held them at every point; changed at their charge, he rolled off with his troops re-inspirited by Granger's timely brigades. As the effects of the enemy grew feebler, he threw forward several brigades and drove him back almost beyond his old position, regaining one of his most important hospitals.

I firmly believe that the sudden giving way of the right divisions insured the salvation of the army. The right had been denuded of troops to reinforce the left. The brave divisions that remained endeavored to close up the gaps on the double quick, but many, as I have already said, were shot down on the march. Cut up piecemeal, by the aerial mowing of the rebels on their own left, they must either have been surrounded or have given way as they did, precipitately.

There is every reason to believe that the sudden disappearance of these two divisions threw the enemy into equal disorder. Some of his advance brigades were opposed, others advanced slowly through forests, exposed their ammunition on the vacant plain. At sunset on Sunday night Bragg's lines must have been as curiously disposed as our own.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Night fell, and the battle of Chickamauga still a riddle to us attempt to award victory to either side—was over. We had lost ground and guns, but we had terribly punished the enemy. Our casualties, with such terrific fighting, will not be found so heavy as might be anticipated. The loss of the enemy must be fearful. Our soldiers were used with tremendous effort, and the enemy probably did not use a half dozen batteries. He had told us men that this battle could only be won by the bayonet, but the bayonet has not won it yet.

Glorious Thomas was the tower of strength that saved the army. On Saturday, I saw him for a moment, as the rattle of fearful bullets rolled in front of him. He involuntarily stopped to look at one of the grandest pictures I ever saw, though one of the least pretensions. Sitting on his magnificent horse, watching every sign of the contest with a serene air, that I could have deemed impossible in mortal man in such a scene, I felt a reverence for him that I never felt before. It was a picture of ineffable courage, tempered with wisdom and gentleness. Angelo would have thrown aside his shield if he could have seen Thomas as I saw him, the incarnation of manly majesty.

The last time I had seen him he was giving a weary struggle on the march past direction where to find his regiment. He did this with a kindly and gentle air that struck me at the time as a symbol of the true gentleman. Known as a boy as "Old George Thomas," from the open integrity of his character, it is not strange that Providence selected him to wrench safety, if not victory, out of a lost battle.

Where was Sherman? "Captured! I did you have been told that right. 'Captured! I did not believe it. I had seen too much of him and his fighting division to credit that story. At midnight, I saw him, and reported for duty with him and more guns than he had carried into the fight originally!

Even after he was cut off he repelled a desperate charge of the enemy, and one of his regiments—the 51st Illinois—captured the battle flag of the 24th Alabama and the major of the regiment, who was carrying it, endeavoring to rally his men. The General is an ardent, practical student of route, as I had occasion to know while riding with his staff one day, on a march of six miles. I must have gone double that distance before I found that the General was taking his daily lesson in geography. Gathering together his noble brigades, two of whom and lost their beloved leaders, he struck across the Missionary Ridge directly to the west, as the rebels had possession of the country to the north of him, including, for all he knew, even the road. Reaching the top of the ridge, he ordered the "assembly" to be blown, and picked up all the stragglers from other divisions of the army in the fight, but lost three pieces of artillery and other divisions had been abandoned, and took it in charge. In this way he saved a whole battery, given up for lost by Johnson.

With all that was left of his own division, and with a long line of stragglers and additional artillery, he struck the road on top of Missionary Ridge, which he traversed until he found it in possession of the enemy. Quietly breaking off again to the west, he boldly passed the enemy's flank, regaining the road, and turning east through Rossville, and without halting a moment, he reinforced Thomas by midnight, as I have already indicated.

Before dark, McCook and Crittenden returned to the field, and during the night the army was reorganized and placed in the position around Rossville, shown on the map.

Monday, all expected a renewal of the fight. Thomas held the impregnable gap through Missionary Ridge, at Rossville; McCook's divisions were thrown to the west of the ridge, while Crittenden and Granger were either held in reserve or awarded points on the left.

But the enemy was wary. Toward noon he sent up a heavy line of skirmishers, but they ran off precipitately after a few volleys from our brave lads. Late in the afternoon, seeing the dust rising from one of our trains carrying provisions to the front, they threw a few shells in the direction, which did no damage.

I rode through the lines that day, and can testify that our army was in excellent spirits. I found McCook's and Crittenden's corps, branded as utterly defeated by a sudden correspondent, standing behind a palisade of rails and logs, covered by a partial abatis and covered by bushes. Cannon were in position, and they, too, were masked with bushes. Thomas, on the ridge, though holding a position strong naturally, had erected good palisades, and was simply impregnable.

"The struggle that had reached Chattanooga came back during Monday, im-with shouts by their regiments, something in the following manner: "Hailo, hailo, comes old Stonewall!" "Well, I'll be d— here's a Super!" thought he was killed. And each ally would be followed by a shout that spoke of anything but discomfort or lack of spirit.

By Monday night the army was all together again and perfectly reorganized. But there were many reasons why it should fall back on Chattanooga. The town was already partially fortified, and the position was as strong as the one they occupied around Rossville. The fear was that the enemy might attempt to cross the Tennessee, and this could best be prevented, if the aim of such a movement best defeated, by our army being ready to cross at any moment. Accordingly, in the evening, the positions of the late constitutional convention, and its acts of gradual emancipation will show how the rebel and pro-slavery men inspire its course. They will denounce Gov. Gamble's usurpation of power and gross abuse of it, and will charge that his pro-slavery conservatism is responsible for the present distracted state of affairs in Missouri. Had it been possible to have remained true to the national administration and at the same time to support Gov. Gamble, their support would have been cheerful and ungrudging. His organization of the state militia, his denunciation of an unconstitutional and without warrant and for law.

Gov. Schuchman's policy they will declare to have been d—d to an effort to subvert national authority and substitute state rule, and instance a case in which he sustained Gov. Gamble in forbidding the state militia to enlist in federal regiments. They will claim that the effect of his orders has been to disarm loyal men and put arms in the hands of disloyal men, and they denounce his unwarranted attacks on the freedom of speech and of the press, the arrest of officers recruiting for negro regiments, under the authority of the war department, their incarceration in prisons, and the return of the negroes to rebel masters.

They conclude what they have to say of Schuchman by declaring the state in a worse condition than it has been at any time since the war commenced, and therefore ask for a new commander of that department, and suggest that if it would not be improper they would like to name as that new commander, General Butler, believing that he would restore order within thirty days. Whether the loyal heart of Missouri is to be cheered, is for the President to say. It refuses and Missouri remains the victim of conservative policy, the state of affairs will be deplorable.

They ask him to remember who first rallied to the Union flag at Camp Jackson; who saved St. Louis and the Valley of the Mississippi. They refer proudly to what Missouri has done in the war, and say it can now secure no redress of grievances, and no efforts to save her to order. And to the Union, her late will force a dark page in the history of details may be changed, but the above shows, though in very meagre form, the main points to be presented in their address. It will probably be perfected to-morrow, and presented on Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

The government will be compelled to raise more troops. The present draft will not give more than 75,000. Another draft will take place very soon. The western states are expected to raise their quotas by volunteering. The government offers a bounty of $300, and expects by the two drafts and by volunteering to raise 300,000 men by the first of January.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

The Ransons are to have a grand reception on Thursday. The committee of the city council waits on the admiral and presents resolutions of welcome, and will be accompanied on the return by the admiral and his officers, and landing at some point up town, march down Broadway to the City Hall, escorted by the entire first division of the state militia. The affair promises to be equal to the Prince of Wales reception.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 29.

Special to Chicago Tribune.—General Hooker and Butterfield arrived in this city to-day. They were surrounded at the Barntown House this evening, in response to the compliment they both made a few remarks. Gen. Hooker said that he had not come to make a speech, but that the people would soon hear from him in the thunder tones of artillery and musketry, and that his mission was accomplished the people must excuse him from making a speech, but that his mission was accomplished he would come back and talk to the people until they were tired of hearing him.

The purpose of General Butterfield's remarks was the same as those of Hooker. Gen. Hooker said that he had received direct orders from Gen. Rosecrans, stating that he still occupied the position taken by him on the 20th inst., directly after the battle, and that he will be able to hold it for a month, or longer.

No reliance is to be placed in the news of the surrender of Rosecrans, contained in the New York market reports.

Gen. Burnside was at Nashville to-day.

MORNING DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

Special to the World.—No fears need be entertained that the Army of the Potomac is weaker than the forces in front. From the latest advices it appears that it largely outnumbered the enemy's army, placing infantry against the rebel lines of all arms, while we have a very large force of cavalry seldom idle, but daily charging the enemy, and making movements on its part difficult.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

The schooner Ireland and John J. Houseman were captured by the rebels in Chesapeake Bay previous to the 23d, plundered and set adrift. The Alexandria was captured and plundered, and run ashore.

The government schooner Alliance, laden with provisions and stores, valued at $30,000, was also captured. The crews of the other vessels were put aboard of her, and she was last seen off Sand Shoals, bound south.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.

Special to Chicago Tribune.—The meeting of the Missouri and Kansas delegations to-night was quite enthusiastic. The delegates read the address they had prepared to be presented to the president, the reading of which was repeatedly interrupted by vociferous cheering. It has not yet been adopted, and may possibly receive some slight amendment, but it will be safe to say that the following will embrace the main points.

It will begin by stating the manner in which delegations were appointed and the imperative necessity that existed for such representations and requests as they prepared to make. After reaffirming their attachment to the administration and to the president, and their determination to stand by the proclamation of emancipation, they proceed to lay down the real positions of the radical and the conservative parties in Missouri, and call upon the president to judge from this who are and who are not his friends and the friends of the administration in that state.

account they declare the emancipation proclamation a necessity and irrevocable. They say they accept the name of radicals and deserve no other. They are radical to the core, and are determined to see the institution of slavery wiped out forever in Missouri.

Referring to the conservatives who seemed to have the ear of the president, they charge that in their numbers will be found every man who is in favor of slavery, every man whose hands are stained with the blood of Union men, every man who is opposed to the suppression of the rebellion, every man who is opposed to the enlistment of negroes, and other distinctive features of administrative policy.

They will then enter upon the discussion of the points of the late constitutional convention, and its acts of gradual emancipation will show how the rebel and pro-slavery men inspire its course. long way ahead of Franklin. It is not pronounced so good a general as Franklin will leave an enemy of 1,000 or 1,500 strong in his rear to cut off his train and recapture Brashear, and occupy Lafourche. The Confederate force on the Teche must be destroyed or dispersed before the movement can be made to Texas with any promise of success. If there is not an engagement at Camp Bland, there may be one at New Iberia, unless the Confederates should retreat along the road to Texas. The failure of the Sabine Pass expedition leaves for them an unobstructed road to Houston.

The Times letter of the same date says: Saturday night last a steamer arrived here from Natchez with some 500 miles of cotton. A guerrilla force of 1,500 men, under Col. Logan, are operating on the Mississippi. Their only aim seems to be to burn or destroy what little is left on the plantations. Logan and some of his men made a dash upon the vicinity of Natchez, and burned 500 bales of cotton almost within the suburbs of the city. The cotton belonged to several planters who were waiting an opportunity to bring it within the federal lines.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

Times special.—The 20th and 21st army corps have been consolidated and will be called the 4th corps. They are to be commanded by Major General Gordon Granger. The war department has ordered a court of inquiry to investigate the conduct of Gen. McCook and Crittenden in the late battles near Chattanooga.

The enforcement of the death penalty in the army of the Potomac is rapidly decreasing the number of deserters. Conscript numbers, and also deserters, who are forwarded to their regiments for trial and punishment. No movements reported in front to-day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.

Special to Herald.—It is stated that General Schoenck has been removed from the command of the Middle Department, comprising the city of Baltimore and part of Maryland. It is said that General Tyler is to take command of the department. Everything along the lines has been quiet since Thursday, and there is no indication of an immediate movement unless by the enemy's forces, for which we are prepared.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.

The Herald's Morris Island letter reports the arrival of two or three divisions of Lee's army in Charleston. Rosecrans' force now numbers 25,000 to 30,000 men. Gen. Evans' division is known to be with him. On the 24th out of one hundred rifled guns opened for a while on Fort Johnson with great effect.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.

Major General Hooker arrived last night. The Gazette says an official dispatch received from Rosecrans last evening, dated yesterday afternoon, states that the situation is unchanged. Our army held a strong defensive position. No attempt has been made by the enemy to disturb it.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.

Flour less active and 5c lower at 5 7/8 to 5 9/8 for extra; 5 0/8 to 5 1/8 for R. H. O. Wheat dull and 1c lower at 1 13/16 for old; Chicago spring; 1 15/16 to 1 3/4 for Milwaukee; 1 29/32 for winter red. Corn recs 122.648 bushels; market 1c lower at 86 1/2. Oats 68 1/2. Pork firmer at 13.00 for old and 14.00 for new mess. Lard a shade easier at 10 1/2. Stocks dull and drooping at 54 1/2. Money irregular. Money 6 1/2. Gold 14 1/2.

The Herald's letter from New Orleans, 20th, says: From high officials in Grant's army, I learn that rebel deserters state that Kirby Smith has relinquished himself military duties of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas, and has issued a proclamation calling out the whites between 16 and 60.

Union meetings have been held in Tennessee and Mississippi, and the stars and stripes have been raised nearly 15 miles in the rear of Vicksburg.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 30.

The American has the Richmond Enquirer of yesterday. A dispatch dated Charleston, Sept. 28th, says the enemy with their Morris Island batteries were firing slowly at the ruins of Sumter to-day, for the first time for several weeks. No damage done.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.

A letter from the steamer Sentinel, dated Rio del Norte, 14th inst., says they captured the most valuable prize of the war—a British battle steamer over 300 feet long, evidently fitted out in England for a rebel man-of-war.

The twenty-second regiment was at Martinsburg on the 22d inst.

WISCONSIN WOUNDED.—Gen. Starkweather was wounded in the arm, but not seriously, in the recent battle at Chickamauga.

Capt. Wm. Mitchell, of Co. D, 1st Wisconsin, was killed.

Lieut. Col. West, is among the wounded.

Thos. McMullen, Co. A, and Sergeant George A. Buckstoff, Co. A, of the 1st regiment; Lieut. R. M. Adams, A, 21st, and Lieut. E. P. Stowell, D, 10th Wisconsin, were also wounded, and are at hospital No. 15, Nashville.

THE TENTH WISCONSIN IN THE LATE BATTLE.—The following mention is made of the 10th Wisconsin in the account of the battle of Chickamauga, by the correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette. The incident occurred in the fight on Saturday, the 19th inst.

The brigade commanded by Col. B. F. Scribner, 38th Indiana, one of the very first in the army, was left particularly exposed, as its right flank had been somewhat too far advanced when it took position in the morning. Almost before the rebels were driven in, it found itself literally surrounded by three its numbers, who came upon it with infernal yell, pouring volley after volley of deadly bullets into the very bosom of the gallant brigade.

For a moment it was thrown into confusion, and that moment sufficed to place the rebels upon its front, flanks, and rear. But it was not destined to surrender. The 2d, 33d and 94th Ohio, the 35th Indiana, the 10th Wisconsin, and Loomis' battery, are composed of the best material in their respective states, and their commander Scribner, had succeeded in infusing in them his own magnanimous and gallant spirit. Gathering together their broken ranks under the infernal fire which every instant moved them down, and following their heroic leader, they charged the dense legions surrounding them, and, like a whirlwind in a forest, tore their way through.

ROSECRANS OF THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.—Sundry gentlemen of the democratic faith, comprising the members of the Ohio democratic state central committee, have taken upon themselves to write to Gen. Rosecrans, to ask what regulations prevail in his army regarding the circulation of newspapers and other political documents. They are moved to this from the fact that the soldiers of the Cumberland must have enough of such Vallandighamism as the Cincinnati Enquirer, Pittsburgh Courier, Chicago Times, and New York World, the general press, that no authority of his will be used to prevent the free enjoyment by the soldiers of the right of suffrage, which the legislature has guaranteed them. The card which is forwarded to the general press, is as follows:

and unwise to allow stump orators to go to the army to ply their vocation, and then plainly says that no papers that seek to impair the vigor and spirit of the army (as all copperheads do) shall be circulated. He says:

"As to newspapers, pamphlets, and other publications—none have been or will be excluded on the ground of party politics. But I do not belong to that sentimental class who weakly and timidly allow brutal license to stab true liberty. Hence, when any publication appears among us so licentious, lying, or traitorous, as to endanger the morality or likely to impair the spirit and vigor of the army, I feel bound by reason, justice, and duty to my country, to use my authority to prevent its circulation."

About fortnight since, an Ohio gentleman at Hamilton, C. W., saw Vallandigham walking lovingly arm-in-arm with Breslin, the defaulter, who lives in his style and entertains his "friends" at first handsome residence in that place. Why do not the copperheads run Breslin for governor? Isn't he a "poor exile from Ohio"? Verily, such base ingratitude toward Val's friends is most shameful.
